It is a good thing to have a strike in Georgia every little while, to make the people appreciate having a good, quiet time. Now, on with your automobile roads!

The Duke of Norfolk has a rental income of a million and a quarter, so it's said. We had an idea that all dukes got their income from their American wives, but this one seemed to inherit his.

A California scientist, like many others of his ilk, jumped a new theory. He proposes to take the "jag" from liquor. When he does, he might as well take the stuff from us too. Who wants to be killing time and spending good money drinking firewater that won't make the drunk come.

The Cuban government is not well out of its swaddling clothes before it places an order for 15,000 army rifles with Germany, instead of the United States. The gun makers of this country will turn to Uncle Sam now, and want this thing stopped. They feel that because Cuba owes something to the United States for the help of ten years ago, that such apparatus should be bought here, notwithstanding other countries make a better price.

This paper only appears once a day, if the weather's good. We have no early edition which must catch an early train, or late edition for the city. All we print are run off at or about the same time. So parties walking leisurely in about 4 o'clock, or three o'clock, or even 2:59, with an item for that day's paper are doomed to dismal disappointment. Such a thing occasionally happens. It is an almost every-day occurrence some one giving us an item after the papers have gone to the office, or the route boys are already out doing their rounds. Daily papers want the news the day it happens, and the only thing that pleases them better is to get it just as soon as it happens; it is fresher, and might be in time for that day's paper.

PUT DOWN SUCH PICTURES.

The moving picture shows are good for a community if the pictures are properly selected. The business has grown into a trust, and a board of censors are supposed to pass on all pictures before they are sent out for the public. This board of censors probably does about as much as the ordinary New York board of directors. They possibly haven't turned down a thousand feet of reel in a couple of years. If subjects are shown that are not of a moral or educational nature, they do more harm than good, and when a picture that is not what it ought to be is allowed to go forth, a protest should be made.

The Electric Theatre had a picture here Saturday that was an insult to every citizen of the South, and a board of censors who let such a picture pass with their endorsement should lose its job, and apply for one as scene shifters in a variety show.

This picture purported to be a scene from the Florida turpentine camps. All that looked the part was the tall wheels of the turpentine wagon, a few barrels, some negroes and many pines with scripples about eight years old.

The wholly unnatural part of it was one of the principal characters shown, who staggered drunkenly among the negroes and slashed them with a long whip while they scraped at the pines to put on a "streak." He was supposed to be the slave driver, a cruel boss, but had no semblance of the "woods rider," who looks after such work. He even wore a Shakespearean make-up, with a ruffled collar, and when things didn't move fast enough, had all the negroes to nap one, and he whipped him unmercifully with the long whip, on the naked back.

When a picture like this is being flashed on a thousand canvases all over the country at the same time, it tends to do more harm to the South than another "Uncle Tom's Cabin" lie, and every Southerner ought to make such a protest as will teach the manufacturers of moving picture films that such misrepresentations will not be tolerated.

The local manager of the Electric

Theatre has been giving the people here good, clean shows, but he must get his films from the trusts, and when he doesn't use what they send, he has none. He regrets that this reel was used part of the day Saturday, for it was this or nothing.

SEX OF AMERICAN MEN

It is quite well understood that it is the duty of every European man of letters who visits this country to write flatteringly of the American women. Naturally it is the duty of every European woman of letters to write in the same spirit of flattery to the American men. The fact that there is a man in the United States who can write a letter to a woman in the same spirit of flattery is a very rare thing. This is the case in the United States. Mrs. Clyn says they are quite motherly to English men. You tell me, if you were out with a friend, would you rather have a man of an uncle than just men. They don't try to make love to you on things with two meanings.

We would that this were true, but unfortunately two of three in proportion are in the wrong. As an impartial trader's man to the assertion. While it would be a pity to contradict a lady, we can not keep back the memory of having read in the newspaper a peculiar and story of a soul mate or an affinity or of some very intelligent man who ran away with a girl of his country and came back to England. The story is only the exception. It is true, but we can not be sure. It may be that the American men of like kind are very good authors because they happen to be with English men's and mothers for the moment. Mrs. Clyn speaks as an authority on a person's opinion and perhaps she stands the subject better than we. At any rate we know better than to contradict her.

It may be that the author of the "Web" is not as easy to look at as the woman who is a quantity of it to this may be due to the fact that the University of the American gentleman with whom she has come in contact. In any case, the exception is the rule and which we have had to look at is not a very good one. It is a very young woman to country to write flatteringly of the American women. Naturally it is the duty of every European woman of letters to write in the same chapter on perhaps a gun. It will not do to take seriously the views of foreigners who form their ideas of us after a brief visit. Look out like our friend Mr. West of Mississippi from an isolated fact to a general proposition. — Times Democrat

DOESN'T PAY TO KNOCK

It never pays to depreciate a competitor. That is putting it on a low plane of ethics, but it goes to the point.

No man helps himself by slandering another in business at least. It is not good business. It tends to raise in the mind of a customer a question about the man who does it. Where a bid for print or any article of trade is in negotiation, tell what you can do, and stand on your statements. If you are not sure of yourself and the ability of your house to handle the business thoroughly and well don't bid. If you are sure of it, says Rogers & Hall Company's Bulletin, talk on that assurance. If the customer mentions or inquires about your competitor don't speak ill of him, but tell what your house can do and stick to your own proposition. Be frank and earnest—and be sure of what you are talking about. Don't brag, don't bluff, and don't any knocking.
